

Call for Presentations!

Creating a Culture of Learning and Student Success through Collaboration

Spring FLEX 2010

The Skills for Success Committee and Office of Professional Development are co-sponsoring the second annual Skills for Success Symposium on Friday, February 5, 2010.

This all-day symposium is seeking faculty, staff, student, and administrative presenters. Suggestions for panels and presentations are welcome.

Summaries of presentations and/or activities should be no longer than 300 words. We encourage presenters not only to explain their chosen topics, but also demonstrate the practices using active learning techniques. For more on collaborative learning please visit this Powerpoint site which refers to Elizabeth Barkley's essential work on the subject:

<http://www.canyons.edu/Faculty/kemplera/info/teachers/clt.ppt>

Remember: Collaboration occurs all across campus, not just in the classroom. We encourage presenters to be creative and submit presentations not just about teaching and learning, but also about the different collaborative efforts on campus that have increased student success.

All submissions are due no later than November 20, 2009. Submissions should outline the content and structure of the intended presentation and should be sent to denee.pescarmona@canyons.edu

For more information about the symposium, please contact:

Denee Pescarmona x5042

Fred D'Astoli x3710

Adam Kempler X3266

Leslie Carr x3100 or Sharon Johnston x3443